DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Raymond A. Wampler Farm is located on the northwest side of Savage River Road approximately 1.3 miles northeast of Big Run Road. The farm sits .2 mile back from the road at the base of Buck Hill and consists of a dwelling, a barn, and several outbuildings.

The house is a frame, two story, gable-roofed building. Its basic configuration is an ell-plan consisting of a three bay by one bay block with a two bay by one bay ell. The facade occupies the southwest side of the ell. A porch shelters the facade and continues around to the southeast end-wall and northeast elevation.

The exterior walls are sheathed in German siding with cornerboards. Two over two sash windows with plain board surrounds and simple drip moldings light the building on all elevations. The roof, which is covered with asphalt shingles, has a box cornice with partial gable end returns and plain board frieze below. An exterior, brick, stove chimney is located on the southwest endwall. The porch is supported by chamfered posts on the facade (SW side) and northeast elevation, and by square posts on the southeast endwall. A break in the roofline suggests that the southeast section of the porch was a later addition.

A frame, gable-roofed, bank barn is situated southwest of the house. It rests on a coursed, roughly squared stone foundation and is sided with vertical board.

A corn crib, a coal shed, and several other early to mid twentieth century outbuildings are also located on the site.
